[The pathogenesis of cancer, self-destructing and immune-checkpoint inhibitors: a new dawn for cancer treatment in Japan]. The treatment outcome for cancer has recently been improved by new technologies, however, the novel therapeutic strategies that have made a real difference in cancer treatment are only approved in the US and EU. This situation should be the catalyst for the development of approved novel therapeutic agents for cancer and other diseases in Japan in the future. The 'Self-destructive system' is mainly composed of immune-checkpoint inhibitors. The most famous immune-checkpoint inhibitors are the PD-1 inhibitors. However, they can induce a variety of immune-related adverse events. In Japan, besides the conventional drugs such as radiotherapy and chemotherapy, a new cancer therapy called immunotherapy is being developed with a new concept different from the mechanism of PD-1 inhibitors. The drug was named "Bispecific antibodies", which consist of 2 antibodies linked to each other with a small molecule, and is expected to enhance the effect of an anticancer antibody by binding to 2 kinds of antigens located on tumor cells. Moreover, the gene-modified T-cell therapy has recently been developed as another new concept in cancer therapy. It consists of genetically modified T-cells that can target and kill cancer cells. Based on the success of self-destructing system, cancer therapy with self-destructing system, self-destructing system that consists of immune-checkpoint inhibitors, gene-modified T-cells, anticancer antibodies, and bispecific antibodies is expected to be utilized worldwide.Remember the 1985 film "Repo Man"? You'll be able to see it in 3-D once again because it's heading back to theaters for a limited run, starting Oct. 9. The major reason for the limited run? Director Ivan Reitman had to spend a lot of time just running around filming new scenes for his sequel, "Repo: The Genetic Opera." "Repo: The Genetic Opera" is based on the comic book series of the same name that launched in 1983. The original "Repo Man" got a limited release back in 1985, which was part of a wave of horror films at the time. The film -- which was written, directed, and produced by Re
