The risk of thromboembolism after cardiovascular prosthesis implantation has been a major concern in the selection of oral anticoagulant therapy for thromboembolic prophylaxis. Although the risk of thromboembolism for surgical mitral valve replacement has been addressed in several recent studies, there are no such data for heart valve replacement in patients with atrial fibrillation. We report our experience with a systematic screening protocol for prophylaxis and management of thromboembolism in patients with atrial fibrillation with prosthetic valves. One hundred and twenty-one patients with atrial fibrillation were referred for anticoagulant therapy after mitral or aortic valve replacement. None of these patients had a history of venous thromboembolism. A point-of-care blood test was performed for PT and aPTT with a HemosIL aPTT reagent; levels were compared with those of an ACL Top refractometer reference standard. Forty-two percent of patients were men and the mean age was 44.2 +/- 14 years. Mean follow-up was 1.6 +/- 0.7 years. Seven patients had a PT New Home Builder News
