Have you ever wondered how a half frozen man could survive the ferocious Russian winter? Have you ever asked yourself about the life of a Christian in present day Iran? How can a 2,500 year old tradition survive without a trace? If we don't, it will die. In Exodus, Moses does not die, he chooses to learn to serve his brother-in-law instead. These stories are not fictional, they are based on real-life experiences. When I came to know these stories, I remembered my childhood days spent in an Iranian village called Kukhalay Darreh. When the villagers woke up in the morning, they prepared their meal after praying the Allah. Imagine my surprise when I found out the villagers' name was Kurd! Through their stories, I learn to treasure Allah because He makes the most amazing miracles. In Iranian communities, the high schools were divided into boys' schools and girls' schools. Boys were taught religion, while girls were taught education, health care and sewing. There were restrictions regarding boys and girls. Like, if a man's brother had a girl pregnant, he could lock his girl up in a room for 5 years or punish her family severely. The basic
