I have a stored procedure that needs to update several fields in a Oracle table. It has 10 parameters. I would need to execute this multiple times. What is the best way to execute this (without any external interface, only through Oracle)? Should I do it directly in the PL/SOL, or I should use the execute anonymous? Is there any other option? A: I think you need to do it. See You can execute a query or a stored procedure with the execute statement. Execute specifies a statement (subprogram or SQL statement) that is executed in the database You should not execute it directly in PL/SQL, since that will lead to an endless loop if the SP does not return an exit status. Q: How do I configure Windows Server 2012 to automatically switch to the wifi hotspot I have created a wifi hotspot with the following settings in the wifi controller. I am running Windows Server 2012 (64-bit) and have successfully added the wifi network using my mobile device, as well as successfully connected to it. The problem is, I want Windows Server to automatically connect to the wifi network. I tried configuring this through a combination of the properties shown in the video (Here are the steps I took: Scanned Scanned Scanned Built the.ipa with "iTunes" Downloaded the.ipa Opened it with "AppStore" Had the "Add to Home Screen" button selected None of these steps worked, and the app did not appear on my lock screen, never
