It is a auxiliary route running east-to-west from the interchange with I-75/SR 160 (Wills Ferry Road) to the airport. Its western terminus is the E. Cleveland Wallace Boulevard at-grade intersection. The highway's eastern terminus is a ramp to the airport's runway, just east of the airport's east end. It was constructed in 2014. History The Commercial Railroad was built in 2014 by the city of Columbus, the Georgia Department of Transportation, and the Columbus Region of the Georgia Regional Transportation Authority. The state's Department of Transportation included the project as part of a plan to add highway mileage in both rural and urban areas; the entire $150.7 million project was completed in late 2014. The highway is named for Colonel James C. Monroe (see Monroe's Mills, Georgia), who built the Columbus and Augusta Railroad, an early predecessor to the Southern Railway. Route description The Commercial Railroad begins in a frontage road just west of SR 160, at a grade crossing with a few access roads. East of I-75, it is a divided highway with one carriageway, unsigned SR 6105. The ramp from northbound US 50 to the Commercial Railroad heads north along the frontage road. Just west of Reedy Creek Road, where it crosses over the CSX line, it ends at an interchange with US
