knowledge or confidence. Too much knowledge and confidence and you become arrogant and overconfident, not to mention dumb and boring. Some psychologists even say that that's what's wrong with every generation of millennials and Generation Z. And I get it. Knowledge is power, and power is dangerous. But, it's also an excuse to not learn anything. Knowledge is a tricky thing. Yes, it's empowering and necessary, but too much knowledge can destroy your creativity. There is a time and place for doing research and learning. There's always an excuse to learn. And here are 5 reasons why learning is good: 1. It's fun! Learning is fun, it's also always interesting. You get to hear things you never heard before, it's exciting and you get to feel smart and knowledgeable. 2. You learn to appreciate the world. Every day we are exposed to so much information from sources such as the news, social media and just our environment around us. It can be overwhelming and it's so easy to get caught up in these things that you forget to enjoy the beauty of the world. With learning you become more aware of the world around you. You realise that learning makes you more sensitive to what is happening, even if it's just on a global scale. 3. You get to have experiences.

The ban has been in effect since the start of the year, but the decision to extend it indefinitely came as a surprise when it was officially announced on Sunday. "A decision was made to ban the entry of Syrian and Iraqi tourists for an indefinite period, without giving a reason for the measure," a government spokesman told AFP. Tourism Minister Fayez Ghosn said the ban was applied because of what he called "the financial and economic crisis" in Lebanon, and was not meant as a "political statement".
