I tried this, and it didn't work. Pattern pattern = Pattern.compile("(.*?).(.*?).(.*?).(.*?) (.+?)(.+?)");
Matcher matcher = pattern.matcher(string); Here's what my output looks like:
Pattern.compile("(.*?).(.*?).(.*?).(.*?) (.+?)(.+?)"); Matcher matcher = pattern.matcher(string); Output from Matcher.matches() Matcher.matches() output A: Consider this regex for your requirements (which is UNMATCHED): (.*?).(.*?).(.*?).(.*?) (.*) (.*) See the regex demo The (.*?).(.*?) will match anything in the first group,.*, followed by.*, followed by anything in the third group, (.*?), and so on. The (.*?) (.*) will match anything in the second group,.*, followed by anything in the fourth group, (.*?), and so on. Finally, the (.*?) will match anything in the fifth group, (.*?), followed by anything in the sixth group, (.*?) and so on. To extract the required substrings into a list of elements you may use a capturing group and use the Matcher.find() method, and then use the Matcher.group(1) to get the first subgroup, and so on. in a separate array space I want to use c++ style array, where the items can be inserted at a
