===== Header is a tool that allows you to quickly grab the header of a website and save it to a.txt file. You can also download the header to your computer using the Post or the Head option of Header. The program is developed using Java, AWT and SWING. As many other programs in our directory, Header was tested using the "" website. The header is a element of HTML, HTML stands for HyperText Markup Language, the header usually contains information that is displayed at the top of a web page, such as site name, site address and the site's title. The header is usually only displayed for a single page, and is not seen on the pages that follow. It is also not part of the HTML code of the page, but is a CSS(Cascading Style Sheets) property. The developer of the web page must include in the document the line "html { display: -webkit-box; }" in order to display the header properly. All headers can be found on Wikipedia. Description of the program's functioning:

===== Header features the following main functions: - Get: get the header of a website - Post: post the header of a website - Head: head the header of a website The Get option of the Header allows you to grab the header of the website and save it to a.txt file. The header is displayed in the browser as a link in the "About" section of the window of the browser. The Post option allows you to post the header of the website to the variable head, where you can then save it to a.txt file. The header will be displayed in the browser as a link in the "About" section of the window of the browser. The Head option allows you to head the header of the website. You can also download the header to your computer using this option. Download / Install Header: ===== 1. Install the program using the installer package. 2.
