What's New in the?

PhishBlock is an intuitive software solution aimed at protecting you and your personal information from cyber attacks, by preventing access to websites with a known reputation for infecting computers. Approachable and accessible UI The program is quite simple to handle, its usage requiring little to no prior experience with such tools, particularly since all you need to do is run it and and allow it to do its job. The main window of PhishBlock will display a history of blocked websites, while also enabling you to manually add URLs, Name Hosts or IP Addresses to the default database. Effortlessly clock access to dangerous websites The web is a notoriously unsafe place, as it can infect your computer with all sorts of malware, some of which not even your antivirus will be able to see, until it is too late and your personal information is in the hands of ill-intended individuals. PhishBlock aims to prevent that from happening altogether, by detecting and disallowing access to webpages, IP addresses or DNS hostnames that are signaled as infected. It does this by means of a network filter driver, in order to stop the problem before it even becomes one for you. As such, every time you unknowingly try to browse a perilous web page, the application automatically closes it and informs you that is has been blocked. This way, PhishBlock reduces the likelihood that your data may be stolen and used for illicit purposes. Moreover, you can add yourself websites to the database, that you know are infected, this information being shared with other users of the utility. However, it also draws its data from online sources. A handy means of preventing malware from affecting you To conclude, PhishBlock is a practical and user-friendly tool that can help you further protect your system from intrusions, enabling you to keep your data safe by preventing your PC from getting infected, rather than deal with the consequences later. A: I have found something similar that is also very simple, easy to use and free of charge. It does not use any kind of a firewall or IPS, but it does block access to many harmful websites based on a reputation or social media information. You can add sites that you want to block to a list of sites that you would like to allow. Once you add the sites you want, the system will periodically check sites you have added to the list to determine if the sites you want to allow are still being visited. If not, it will block them. If you have been plagued by popups, phishing attempts, viruses, or any other unwanted browser activity, then you can use this free browser add-on. On Mac OS X, it is called Hola, which is available on the official Hola website. Also, you can get it for Windows, Linux, Android and IOS. Beliefnet Radio: Weekdays 10 a.m
